Charges Made Against State Liquor Commission
—Hearing Aug. 28

Maine's Executive Council Thursday invited the State Liquor Commission "to present evidence in defense of their administration" at a public hearing Aug. 28. Attorney General Cowan said he was prepared to offer about 200 specific charges of commission failure to enforce the liquor laws.

The Council's action followed two days of secret examination of Commission activities. In an order calling the hearing, the council indicated its unwillingness to remove the three commissioners from office without a public examination of accusations that the commission "in many instances apparently administered in disregard of law."

"The commission," said Cowan, "apparently has set up its own system of interpretation of the liquor laws, and it has been exceedingly moderate in the imposition of sentences."

Cowan said he would produce at the hearing all records of the commission and those employees whose testimony would be deemed necessary.

Six of the seven councilors present voted unanimously for the hearing after a series of conferences. Councilor Russ of Caribou was absent.

"Public confidence and justice to all parties concerned," the council order read, "indicate the desirability of a public hearing. It is not the desire of the Governor and Council to remove said commission from office without giving them an opportunity to present evidence in defense of their administration."

The order also directed that Attorney General Cowan prepare and present at the hearing "evidence in relation to the administration of the affairs of the liquor commission."

Gov. Sewall presented to the council certain information which he said he obtained from the Commission last Friday when he called the board into private session.

After that meeting, Sewall said he had been concerned for some time about the Commission's administration and operation of the liquor laws.

Cowan said the specifications, some of which he explained had been prepared, related only to the charge of non-feasance which under the law, he explained, was failure to perform duties required

Rationing Gasoline

A. L. A. Will Oppose It In Advance of Similar Action
In Canada

William A. Thibodeau, general manager of the Automobile Legal Association (A.L.A.) warns that any attempt to ration gasoline to motorists on the eastern seaboard States in advance of similar rationing in Canada will meet with serious opposition on the part of all motorists and the many thousands who benefit through the touring industry.

A telegram received from D. R. Oliver, Director of the Travel and Publicity Bureau of the Province of Ontario, states:

"Stories that gasoline is rationed in Canada to 15 gallons per month is absolutely untrue. There is no limit at the present time on the amount of gas Canadians or Americans may buy. Our only restrictions concern hours of sale. No one can buy gasoline Sunday or between 7 o'clock the evening of any week-day and 7 o'clock of the following morning."

In commenting on the situation, Mr. Thibodeau said: "While everyone is willing to co-operate to conserve gasoline for national defense, motorists will not tolerate unfairness and injustice. Everyone knows that Canada receives its gasoline from the United States and if Canadians can purchase unlimited quantities, as stated in this telegram, and United States citizens are restricted to specified amounts the reaction will be extremely unfavorable and will severely damage the voluntary co-operation necessary to conserve gasoline."

by statute.

Raymond E. Thurston of Rockland, one of the liquor commissioners told newsmen that the Commission had no comment on the council's action.

It was expected that Frank A. Tirrell, Jr., of Rockland would represent the commission at the scheduled hearing, if it accepted the council's invitation. Earlier in the day, Tirrell said he had been called in as counsel for the Commission.

It was the second time since the set up of the State liquor system several years ago that a state liquor administrative board had come under executive scrutiny.

The commissioners are appointed to serve at the pleasure of the Governor and Council. Under the law they could be removed without hearing, Cowan said. Terms of the present commissioners expire in 1943.

A Dizzy, Dizzy Week

Showing How Camden-
Rockport Will Celebrate
Their 150th

With the opening of the 150th Anniversary Celebration of the incorporation of the towns of Camden and Rockport less than a week away, members of the 38 committees appointed by Chairman John L. Tewksbury are busy perfecting plans for the week of events starting Aug. 14.

A change in the schedule for the parade has been announced by Executive Chairman Milford Payson, from Sunday afternoon as originally scheduled, to 4:30 Saturday afternoon. This parade will represent historical events in Camden-Rockport history from the time the settlers arrived to the present day, and persons prominent in the town in olden days will also be represented.

The pageant, depicting the wedding of Nathaniel Hosmer and Mary Wheeler, will take place Friday, with the bridal party accompanied by men on horseback driving in a buggy from Rockport to Melvin Heights, where the wedding supper will be served, and proceeding by ox-cart to the Snow Bowl for an old-time wedding reception.

Highlights of the week's program also include an address by Ben Ames Williams, noted author, at Camden Theatre Monday, Aug. 18, and an interview by Richard Matthews Hallet, well-known writer with two Camden citizens. Saturday there will be a pageant on the waterfront, and in the evening a bonfire, old-time political rally and parade followed by old-fashioned square dancing at the Opera House.

Special town meetings will be held in both Rockport and Camden, and Friday a post rider will deliver the mail on horseback between Rockport and Camden postoffices.

Open house at Camden and Rockport this week will include the opening of old homes, gardens, public buildings, and factories, and a hospitality tea at the Bok amphitheatre. A tableau depicting the dramatic refusal of William Conway of Camden to lower the American flag in surrender at the Pensacola Navy Yard, during the Civil War, will be directed by Mrs. William Talbot of Rockland and Portland.

Addresses by Thomas M. Griffiths, State historian and Dr. Bertam E. Packard will feature the annual meeting of the Camden Historical Society Wednesday, Aug. 20.

Other events on the program include a horse show and exhibition of old vehicles, sports contests, including golf and tennis tournaments, horseshoe, wrestling and shooting contests, a bicycle parade, boat races, band concerts, special church services and an old-fashioned supper.

Well filled window boxes, projecting from the second story of Carini block, add a nice bit of color to that section of Main street, and it's a pity that pedestrians do not have a better opportunity to enjoy them. The office is occupied by Dr. David G. Hodgkins.

[EDITORIAL]WISHING CAMDEN-ROCKPORT SUCCESS

With no previous blare of trumpets the towns of Camden and Rockport suddenly unload upon an interested world the announcement that they are to celebrate the 150th anniversary of the two towns the week beginning Aug. 14. The affair is under the direction of the Camden Historical Society, John L. Tewksbury, chairman, and has already taken on such proportions as to indicate that the observance will be a fitting one, and that the townspeople, Summer visitors, and guests from far and wide are to be vastly entertained. Each day and each night will offer them special attractions, colorful to a degree, and with such a variety of diversions that none can fail to be interested.

The bitterness which marked the separation of the two towns has suddenly disappeared. In spite of the fact that they are separate municipalities their interests are identical and scenically they combine into one of the most beautiful localities to be found anywhere in the Pine Tree State. They vie with each other in public spirit, and anything attempted by either Camden or Rockport is foreordained to success, and that's why the approaching celebration is going to be such a winner. Neighbor Rockland bestows its blessing.

STEVE ALSO TOOK A CHANCE

That New York, Washington, Chicago and Los Angeles will not be bombed by the Axis powers is a 1000 to 1 shot, as viewed by that great British agency, Lloyds of London. At a rate of $1 per thousand the agency stands ready to offer this insurance, good for one year, and involving no cancellation clause. The $1 premium covers houses, apartments, hotels, banks and such buildings; on non-manufacturing commercial risks, it rises to $150; on manufacturing risks, excluding armament works, the rate is $2 per $1000. Lloyds agency explained that the odds, or rates, quoted were established as minimum premiums for such war and bombardment insurance and are applicable any place in the United States. Exposed positions like Rockland would probably rather have assurance than insurance.

NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTISM

New England young men flocked to enlist in the Regular Army during the month of July in numbers among the largest since all records for enlistment were broken last fall. During the month of July, a total of 1021 New England men enlisted for three years in the Regular Army. This figure of 1021 is an increase of 295 over the month of June, and it is an increase 441 over the month of May. Of the total, 468 were from Massachusetts, 143 from Connecticut, 118 from New Hampshire, 115 from Rhode Island, 111 from Maine, and 66 from Vermont.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF INACTION
(Herald Tribune)

The Senate has voted against wrecking the Army at this critical juncture in international affairs. From the first it was difficult to believe that any responsible legislative body could do otherwise; the Senators who supported the extension of the service term nevertheless deserve congratulation for performing a duty which was not too easy. Where there is less cause for gratification is in the extraordinary levity of the opponents of the measure. These men were dealing with the security of the United States. But when Senator Wheeler could cite reports of the British crowds who snatched one holiday week-end between bombings as proof that this country might as well disband its Army, or when Senator Danaher could descend to using the President's voyage in the Potomac "on a carefree vacation" as evidence that there is no emergency, one could only wonder at the buffoonery with which they were doing so.

The issue, as General Marshall said in his testimony, really comes down to the question of whether this country is in an emergency or whether it is not. The opponents of the extension of the service term have based their whole argument on the assumption that there is no emergency. Do they really think so? Would Senator Johnson really be willing to leave the future of the United States to the success of a gamble that the Russians and Germans may kill each other off? They may, but suppose they do not? Would Senator Danaher, after a careful analysis of the situation in Europe, the very threatening situation in the Far East, the probabilities that may come out the world around us, really assume the responsibility of deciding American military policy by the fact that the President took a short vacation cruise? Blindness and inaction in a threatening time carry as direct a responsibility as action—and in the actual history of the last ten years it has proved a far more terrible one. But these men speak as if they were under no responsibility at all, as if they knew that the solid sense of the country will refuse to follow their advice and they can therefore advance any folly they please, since they will never have to face the terrible consequences of answering for it.

Surely, that is an impossible attitude in any legislator, or any group of politicians, in a time as serious as this.

A Bad First Inning Sewed Up Game At
Bucksport—Shells Here Sunday

At Bucksport Thursday night, the Seaboard Paper team jumped on the Pirates for a five run first inning and were never in danger of being caught. Al. McNeilly allowed but two singles while striking out 10 Pirates to make up for his loss here a short while ago.

After the first inning when everything happened to the Pirates they settled down and played good ball. Simmons caught a fine game for the Pirates and got one of the hits.

This team will probably play here next week and the game should prove to be a corker as each team has won one and with the Pirates at full strength a good battle should result.

Garage Explosion

Results In Destruction of Five Buildings In the Town of Monroe

Fire in the wake of a garage explosion destroyed the garage, two houses, and two barns, with practically all their contents, and swept over 50 to 75 acres of open fields and woodland in Monroe.

The explosion, believed to have been caused by some form of spontaneous combustion, occurred about 3:15 p. m. in the public garage operated by Eben Young. The impact blew in the side of the adjoining house, where Mrs. Young was alone, and both buildings were quickly destroyed by the ensuing flames. Two cars tools, and all the contents of the house were lost.

A stiff breeze helped ignite the nearby unoccupied house and barn owned by Mrs. Grace Ritchie, which were destroyed, with all their contents except a little furniture. Albert Durham lost a barn containing hay.

Total loss was estimated at more than $5000.

Belfast and Brooks fire departments assisted the Monroe volunteer firemen in bringing the blaze under control.

Sought Licenses

Results of Auto Hearings
Before Deputy Secretary
Of State

Thirty-six persons were heard Thursday by Harold I. Goss, deputy Secretary of State, to ascertain whether their respective motor vehicle operator's licenses should be reinstated, or to show cause why their licenses should not be revoked.

Local results were: Carlton Vose, Rockland—Petition for Restoration—Leaving the scene—Suspended June 20, 1940. Conditional license may be granted upon filing proof of financial responsibility.

Fred C. Miller, Rockport—Petition for Restoration—Operating while intoxicated—Revoked Feb. 28, 1939. Conditional license if passes driver's test.

Frank Shute, Rockland—Petition for Restoration—Hit and run driving—Suspended Dec. 16, 1938. Conditional license granted upon filing proof of financial responsibility.

Edward C. Davis, Warren—Petition for Restoration—Reckless driving—Suspended July 4, 1940. Con-

Two-base hit, Crowley. Three-base hit, Winters. Double play, Jones to Mickless. Struck out, by C. Ellis 6, by McNeilly 10. Base on balls, off C. Ellis 3, off McNeilly 7.

Peanut Alley brings his Camden Shells to Community Park Sunday at 3 and if a typical Shell-Pirate game is the result the fans will see a good close battle. Cole who caught for the Red Wings of Ellsworth last year will be behind the plate for Camden while Harold Boynton will do the hurling duties. French and Sawyer will be the Pirate battery.

The Pirates have some good games lined up among them the strong Bangor Air Base team which probably will be here a week from Sunday.

The management is trying hard to get the Wiscasset A.C. here for a mid-week game.

The Pirates who have played with a patched up line-up for the last three games hope to be able to have all the regulars on deck from now on and are very glad to see their pitching ace Dick French back from Portland where he went with the last lot of draftees. Dick didn't pass, and what the army loses the Pirates win, as Dick has no superior in these parts as a pitcher and all round ball player.

Freddy Wink, who played with the Pirates two years ago, will probably see service the rest of the season with the club and can fill in anywhere and do a good job. At Bucksport three Winks played, Al, Fred and manager Wink.

Book Review

(By K. S. F.)
The Hudson. With Introduction by Carl Carmer. Photographs and prose by Crowell Bowen. Published by Hastings House, New York City.

This River is well called "The Great River of the Mountains." And brings clearly to view and mind through these marvelous scenes of grandeur, what a vast store of beauty is to be found throughout our country bordering her river systems. No nation of the world is richer than ours with its glory of flowing waters.

In all America no locality is more thrilling with its historical and legendary folklore, and artistic records than this mountains sections and valley after valley, poignant with revealing pictorial study. No part of our nation has had the attention that artists and writers have given this section, and in reality, it might be termed the story of America. From the sparsely populated Adirondacks, where this great river rises, this pictorial epic transports us down through towns, canals, old whaling ports.

The delightful river landings, over the Revolutionary battlefields, down through the witch beds that ribbon the mountains along the thrilling banks. Then comes the never-to-be-forgotten Palisades and on to the teeming metropolis at the very mouth of this gigantic flow of water.

The story of this grand old river, with its discoverer, the life today of its people, the tangible and imaginary past—all come to mind while viewing these photographs with their intimate revealing through the written pages.

For this Great River of the mountains three years were taken in the picturing by this artist of untiring desire for all that was best in tales of bygone years, and pictures of landmark true and enlightening for a visible record of this great valley.

This is a book no true historian or lover of the beautiful in our country should miss. Hastings House has scored a triumph of no mean value in this publication. The vivid pictorial map of the Hudson River section is graphically pictured on the cover inside, giving a perfect key for guidance.

The Memory Man

Says In Plain English What He Thinks About Non-Support For Bands

(By Iree Member)

An old timer once said to me—"There is as much difference in some people as there is in anybody." A queer sentence but the meaning is clear. Some of us are over sensitive, others are on the other side of the fence. It takes everything and all sorts to make a world. Me, I have always been too sensitive. Easily hurt and easily pleased. I prefer to be pleased, and have found that one of the surest ways to be pleased is to please others, if possible. It is not always possible.

Jesus, who taught goodness and mercy, healed the sick and gave His life for the salvation of the human race failed to please everybody and His enemies had Him nailed to the cross and brutally pierced His side with a spear that He might snuffer the more as He gave up His life to redeem all mankind, including His murderers. How then can I, or any other human expect to please everybody? Rather let us give thanks if we can, even in some measure please or assist a portion of our fellow humans.

Easy to please, easy to hurt, on the heights today, in the valley of shadows tomorrow but even striking for the better things, making mistakes, trying not to repeat same, etc., that's free.

Sunday, July 27, I went to the Park to enjoy the concert given by the Rockland City Band. My old friend, Charlie Montgomery, directed in his usual graceful and efficient manner. I was enjoying the concert to the full when something happened that cast a shadow of sadness over the whole performance for me—one of the players descended from the band stand, and, with his cap in his hand tramped all over the Park, humbly begging for pennies. "How have the mighty fallen!" The shame of it! Fine musicians who have devoted time, patience, cash, in fact their full life to perfecting their musical talent, forced to "pass the hat" like a monkey with the old-time organ grinder! Who wouldn't be sad?

Those musicians have to pay good money for transportation. It takes quite a number of cars to take a band and all the instruments from Rockland to Belfast—and unless the cars used are much less greedy for gas than my beautiful Road Louie—the gas cost for each car is one buck. The boys play several hours, giving pleasure and splendid entertainment to many hundreds of people and in return some member of the band is allowed to walk all over the universe and beg for a few pennies! Wow! It is a wonder that the band isn't charged a good stiff price for the privilege of entertaining the public! I call it a shame for a fine band to be treated in such a manner. I am grieved.

Why should band men be selected from all other professional men and be expected to give entertainment gratis? Why not include clergymen, lawyers, lecturers, singers, dentists and all other professional people and ask them to give their services and pay all their expenses out of their own pocket? What a howl would go up to high Heaven!

A good band is a wonderful asset to any city, anywhere but how can we expect to have a good band under conditions as above? What incentive have bandmen to become skilled players if they are offered nothing better than passing the hat for a few pennies as a reward? "The laborer is worthy of his hire" just doesn't apply to bandmen, it seems! Shame!

Why not give your band a break? Bandmen are not hogish. They willingly give more than they receive and I believe a city sponsored band always pays big dividends. A city park where a series of, say 12 concerts are given during the Summer season will, as soon as these concerts become established, draw hundreds of people to the park and help to make the city a trade center for people living in nearby towns; $500, or less, depending on the number of players in the band, will finance the concerts, improve the quality of the music, lend dignity to the boys and the city, cost the taxpayers just a few pennies each for the whole series and furnish entertainment of a high order for thousands of people. Carry out this plan and you will soon be doubly proud of your R. C. Band and Rockland will become known as headquarters for top notch band concerts—and the bandmen will be lifted from the "slough of begging" and placed in a position of dignity, where they belong. Free is sad and grieved. Selah.

Well, life is not all sadness. Iree it anything but sad when Elmer Ames and wife, my niece Jessie, drove into the driveway of my Igloo on the hill very recently. We sure had a great time. Elmer is working Ahoy Yachtsmen!

Rapid Expansion of the Navy Creates a Demand For You

From the Headquarters of the First Naval District, North Station Office Building, 150 Causeway street, Boston, the following letter is addressed to yachtsmen:

"You can be of immediate service in the rapid expansion of the Navy. Numerous small ships are being built or converted for patrol work along our coasts. A large number of officers and men are needed to man these patrol vessels, and it is believed that our yachtsmen have the spirit and the knowledge of the sea which make them a valuable source of seagoing material for such duty in the Naval Reserve. Three opportunities are thus presented to you, and through you to other yachtsmen you may know.

"1—Men are needed for enlisted service, with immediate active duty on vessels patrolling New England waters. Ages 17 to 50.

"2—Those who, because of education, personality and experience at sea are considered qualified, will be given commissions in suitable rank in the Naval Reserve, for similar duties.

"3—Technically trained men are wanted for commissions in ordnance, engineering, ship construction and radio.

"Applicants for reserve commissions will be considered within age limitations as follows: Ensign, 19 to 38 years; Lieutenant (Junior grade), 27 to 38 years; Lieutenant, 38 to 44 years; Lieutenant Commander, 37 to 50 years.

"Other requirements include citizenship, Navy physical standards, parent's consent if a minor, and availability for immediate active duty for "duration." Decision Unpopular

Fans Thought Last Night's Main Bout Should Have Been Called a Draw

The main bout at the Park Street arena last night brought together Jimmy Cook of Rumford and Harry Hillman of Worcester, Mass. As good as has been seen in a long time resulted, with the men evenly matched. The decision in favor of Cook was unpopular with some fans who had been looking for a draw. Eddie LeTourneau of Fort Williams put Kid Norman of Waterville away in the second after he had him down for nine and saved by the bell in the first. LeTourneau showed himself a clean sportsman when he repeatedly stepped back and refused to hit Norman who covered his head and crouched, expecting the knockout punch.

Stan Siviski of Waterville did some more of his questionable fighting in the top prelude against the sleepy eyed colored boy from the Bancroft School, the Brown Bomber, who took the decision of the judges at the end of the scrap.

Eddie Smith of Owl's Head took the decision in the prelude from Alton Wooster, hitting him at will, toying with him in fact.

In our Uncle Samuel's defense project and doing his bit to put us in shape to land on Hitler's proboscis so hard that, well, he will need something besides a handkerchief to use after Uncle Sam says howd'edo to him.

Had a good chat with Jid Sleeper, A. Jay See and Aaron Clark while at the band concert. Aaron is carrying on the song writing business that he and his father, the lamented late Luther Clark has carried on together for many years. Aaron is talented and doing splendid work.

I was delighted to meet once more Allie Dunton, a fine clarinet player and a right royal good fellow. Allie and Luther Clark played side by side for 40 years. Some record.

MADE FOR MUSIC

Have you any idea how many kinds of musical instruments there are in our great world? Some one has reckoned the number reaches one thousand, but that seems quite extravagant in my mind. However there are many and some bad but oh! what a number give us, to skilled artists, deep and treasured delights for heart and soul. Think what an artist with a flute can create in the ecstatic mind. Many favor most piano music alone, but my favorite combination is piano and violin.

"AT HOME" WITH "E. & M."

This man in white is "Jim" Genthner, who handles the big freezer for "E. & M." ice cream and knows the game from A to Z. You are invited to visit the immaculate tiled freezing room at 23 Tilson avenue in Rockland and see the whole process of making this product. It will be an educational and thoroughly worthwhile adventure. The latchstring is out at the "E. & M." plant.—adv.

Seafarers' Guides

A Story of New England Lighthouses As Told By Fred C. Green of Boston

The beacon which stands over the tumbled mass of boulders and ledges at Marshall Point, Port Clyde, is located at the easterly side of the southerly entrance to Port Clyde Harbor. It was first lighted in 1832 and underwent rebuilding in 1858. The white tower has a covered way extending half-way to the white dwelling and there is the conventional white, pyramidal bell tower 114 feet easterly, and a gray stone oil house 240 feet easterly of the tower, with a white boathouse about 110 feet northeasterly, and a white barn and white fuel house near the rear of the dwelling. A weather signal staff stands north-east of the dwelling. The fog bell is machine-operated. The lantern has a height of only 29½ feet and the fixed white light is visible 10½ miles.

It is noted that the United States Weather Bureau is responsible for the signal station, rather than the light house establishment.

Away to sea again and out past the George's Islands to Monhegan, where the tower, standing about in the center of the grim island rears to a height that brings the lantern 178½ feet above high water and gives the flashing white light a visibility range of 19½ miles. This station was established in 1824 and in 1850 it was rebuilt. The light is conical of gray granite, with a brick service room attached, connected with a white dwelling by a covered way. Another white dwelling stands to southward and a red brick oil house 100 feet northwesterly of the tower.

Monhegan Light is 23 miles from Matinicus Rock beacon and 20 miles from Seguin. The list sets forth that when within three miles of the island the light is obscured by high land when bearing between westerly and southerly.

Companion piece is the fog signal station on neighboring Manana Island. This was not created until 1855 and was rebuilt in 1870. The first-class Daboll trumpet is housed in a brick building, with two white dwellings, respectively two and 43 feet distant in a northerly direction. The station is at the westerly side of the island.

In my book is a pencilled notation of the establishment in 1911 of the flashing gas buoy on Old Man Ledge, one-half mile south of the spindle that actually marks the reef, which is near Monhegan. Bearing the mark "No. 2 O.M." it is moored in 180 feet of water.

Franklin Island light, which is a guide to Thomaston, stands on the northwesterly side of Franklin Island, in Muscongus Bay and at the easterly side of the entrance to St. Georges River. A workroom connects the white tower with the dwelling and an oil house of red brick stands 191 feet east of the light, which was established in 1807 and given an overhauling in 1855. A hand-operated bell is used for signalling. The light is fixed white, varied by a white flash every 90 seconds, and can be seen 13 miles from the lantern height of 56½ feet. Mariners are warned to leave the light to the southward and eastward when approaching the river from the westward. There is a hand bell.

Pemaquid Point light, which probably draws as many visitors annually as any of the beacons, stands at the southeasterly point of Pemaquid Neck, at the westerly side of the entrance to Muscongus Bay and to eastward of the entrance to Johns Bay. Listed are a white tower and dwelling with a connecting workroom, a red brick oil house 188 feet west-southwesterly, a small fog signal building of red brick, with a white shaft, 80 feet southwesterly and a white barn 115 feet north-northeasterly of the tower. The station was opened in 1827 and rebuilt in 1857. The fixed white light is given a visibility of 14½ miles from a lantern height of 78½ feet above high water and serves as a guide to Johns Bay, Muscongus Bay and the approach to St. Georges River.

I recent years this beacon has been placed in the unattended class with several months' supply of "canned" acetylene gas stored in the tower and a sun valve to turn the lantern on and off. This device faces the east. Daylight causes it to dim the flame, while the fading light that comes with sunset turns on the light. The other buildings are now used for various purposes, including the storage of fishing tackle for sojourners to use in angling for cunners off the rocks. An automobile park has been provided on the reservation.

Ram Island is next on the list. The beacon is on the northerly side of the island, which is at the easterly side of the Fisherman Island Passage entrance to Boothbay from the eastward. The lower 20 feet of the tower shows gray granite; above that it is painted white. There is a bridge to the shore, with a white dwelling near the shore end. A bell is placed on the northwesterly side of the tower and a red brick oil house stands 500 feet southeasterly of the light, which went into use in 1883 and has no rebuilding record. The bell is operated by machinery. Height of lantern 35 feet, visibility 11¼ miles, characteristic of light, fixed red with fixed white sector showing between west, ½ north and west, ¾ north, and another that shows between northeast, ¾ east and north, northeast, 1-16 east. Mariners entering Fisherman's Island Passage from seaward are warned to keep the light white in order to avoid trouble.

Burnt Island light is at the southerly side of Burnt Island, which is at the westerly side of the northerly part of Boothbay and the entrance to Boothbay Harbor. White tower and white dwelling are hooked up by a covered way and a porch; a white pyramidal bell tower with a mechanical bell is 60 feet southeasterly and an oil house of red brick 168 feet northwesterly of the tower. First lighted in 1821, no mention is made of rebuilding. Lantern height is 61 feet and visibility range 13¼ miles. The light flashes red and has two flashing white sectors, one bearing between northwest, ¾ north and north-northwest, ¾ west, the other between north, ¾ east and north-northeast, 1-16 east. The beacon is a guide to Townsend or Boothbay Harbor and should be kept white by entering vessels.

The Cuckolds light stands on the highest point of the most easterly of the Cuckolds islets, about half a mile southerly of Cape Newagen, at the westerly side of the Boothbay Harbor entrance. Distinguishing marks listed include a white octagonal tower with black lantern on a high, conical, natural-colored shingled roof of a white, half-round fog signal house,

Hodsdon's Chance

So. Thomaston Boy In Line For Appointment To Military Academy

Non-acceptance of the principal named by Representative Margaret Chase Smith, to the Annapolis Naval Academy, has brought an unexpected streak of good fortune to Richard Spaulding Hodsdon of South Thomaston, who had been named as first alternate by Representative Smith.

Hodsdon, who passed an excellent mental examination, is called upon to report next Monday at Annapolis for his physical examination. If he is found in good condition he will be sworn in and fill the vacancy from the Second Congressional District, through Representative Smith's appointment.

Hodsdon, who is spending the Summer in South Thomaston with his mother, is a son of Lieut. Commander R. P. Hodsdon, who has been serving at the U. S. Naval Station, Norfolk, Va.

with a white, one and one-half story dwelling abutting against the northwesterly side of the signal house; a white, half-round stone pier, a bulkhead protecting the easterly side of the dwelling and extending from the pier to outbuildings in rear; white oil house on posts 80 feet westerly of the dwelling. Opened in 1892, this station underwent rebuilding in 1907 and doubtless has a lot of repair work after easterly blows.

The lantern is 50 feet above high water and its double white flash, every six seconds can be seen 13 miles. A first-class Daboll trumpet serves as fog warning.

The light on Hendrick's Head, at the easterly side of the mouth of the Sheepscott River, and which was one of those auctioned off, is listed as a guide to Wiscasset and was opened for that purpose in 1829, to be rebuilt in 1875. A square white tower and dwelling, a pyramidal bell tower in white, near the water's edge to westward, are all connected by covered ways and a brick oil house stands 247 feet northeast of the light. A mechanical bell guarded against fog. The light showed a white flash every 30 seconds and it could be seen 11¼ miles from a lantern height of 42½ feet.

A Firemen's Muster

Will Be Held At Windsor Fair Sunday, Aug. 31—Eighteen Entries

Eighteen or more hand tubs will participate in an old-fashioned firemen's muster as one of the major attractions on the Charity Program offered by Windsor Fair, Sunday Aug. 31.

Competition will be limited to two classes, each contestant having an opportunity to try to outdistance its rival in 15-minute periods. Such well-known fire-fighters as the Tiger and Minnehaha of Boothbay Harbor, Niagara of Brunswick, General Berry of Rockland, Sagadahoc and Senator Baxter of Bath, Baw Besse of Waldo, Gardar, Four of Portland, Vixen and Triumph of Berwick, Tiger of Hallowell, Hecla of Randolph, Androsoggin of Topsham, Niagara of Saco, William Hill of North Berwick, Bess No. 4 of Gardiner, Water Witch of Bowdoinham, and Massasoit of Damariscotta are expected to compete.

The State record for playing water the greatest distance from one of these hand engines is 242 feet, made at Bath some years ago by that City's own Sagadahoc, and remains unbeaten for distance. In musters held last year the Niagara walked off with top honors in the first division while the Androsoggin did likewise in the second classification.

There are few in the Maine State Hand Engine League who hold the record of service which Captain Densmore of Hallowell does. Joining at the age of 15, three years younger than members were supposed to, this 67-year-old veteran has been a member of the State Association for 52 years and has attended all of the musters held within that time. Many a time he has "piped" the winning steam that put the Tiger in the money.

The muster will provide a different form of entertainment than the public ordinarily has an opportunity to see as this type of fire-fighting equipment has been extinct since 1880 when steam was first introduced in this section of the country.

Still Plays Tennis

Former C.-G. Carrier Boy, Now 75, No Longer Considers It a "Sissy" Game

In the Newark, N. J. Sunday Call

of Aug. 3 appeared this news item:
75-YEAR-OLD PLAYER WINS.
Charles Robinson, 75 years old, holds a title in the East Orange T. C. He teamed with Weller B. Evans to win the mid-season mixed doubles yesterday. The event is called mixed doubles in that the team must have one Class A player and one Class B player. In yesterday's final Robinson and Evans defeated Tommy Tabor and Vinny Cook, 6-2, 6-1.

Mr. Robinson, whose present home is 597 Park avenue, East Orange, N. J., and who is a personal friend of The Courier-Gazette's honorary editor, writes:
"The undersigned was born in Rockland Dec. 9, 1866. In my boyhood I delivered my paper to its subscribers in the southern portion of the city. The first time I saw tennis played was on W. O. Fuller's lawn and I thought it the 'sissiest' game for men ever invented, and it was so regarded generally. Any man seen on the street with a tennis bat was sure to hear the derisive words 'love forty,' spoken in a feminine voice.

In 1886 I came to New York, and in 1887 moved to East Orange, and started to play tennis; later I had a court of my own, and still later joined the East Orange Tennis Club (in 1912) and as chairman of its ground committee developed the club from four courts to 12. For that and other services subsequently rendered, I was made a life member.

"In 1938 I retired from business after serving the New York Life Insurance 47 years in the executive department, and now devote all my time to gardening and tennis which I play every day."

The Coast Guard ice breaker, Kickapoo, long familiar to the Rockland waterfront, is now in Curtis Bay, Md. undergoing extensive repairs and alterations before her scheduled return to her Tillson wharf dock about the first of October. The coal bunkers have been reduced in size to allow for hold space forward for the carrying of buoys, as she will be used for an auxiliary buoy boat when she returns and will have the job of supplying the lighthouses of the Maine coast with water, coal and general supplies. In other words she is to be used for a lighthouse tender, buoy boat, coast guard cutter and in her spare time will be on the in-shore patrol. With the lighthouses being supplied from the Kickapoo, there should be considerable trade for local dealers as supplies will be bought by the supply officer here and distributed to other ships and stations.

There will be a supper in the Cushing town house next Tuesday night at 6 o'clock with Miss Jeanette Wales as housekeeper.

Miss Virginia Flint, for the past three years an employee of the Western Union, the past two of which have been in the Rockland office, ends her service with the company tonight in preparation for her forthcoming marriage to Winfield Chatto, which will take place in the early fall.

Warrant Boatwain Fred C. Edgcomb, formerly communications officer on the U.S.C.G. Kickapoo, has been transferred to duty with the neutrality patrol in Iceland.

Round House Sold

Officials of the Rockland and Rockport Lime Company announced this morning that they had sold to the trucking firm known as Scott's Superior Service, the buildings on upper Park street which have been used for the machine shops and the round house of the Limerock Railroad. The buyers will take possession immediately and will convert the buildings into garages and office space for the trucking business.

Scott's Superior Service is owned by George W. and Mabel G. Scott of Belfast who recently sold their holdings in the Belfast Motor Express to a Bangor concern, but retained their contract authority and will operate out of Rockland, using the building bought yesterday for their headquarters.

A strange new noise has annoyed denizens of the waterfront for the past few days and investigation places the blame squarely in the lap of Prof. C. Bradford Mitchell, a faculty member of University of Indiana, who is spending a fortnight at the Harrison Dow cottage at Ash Point. It was Prof. Mitchell who wrote the stories on steamer "W. S. White" ex "Gosnold" ex "Miramar" which appeared in this newspaper. He has had a long association with the steamer, and from the days of his youth retained a longing to hear the sound of the "Gosnold's" whistle. He came to Rockland with that desire upon permost and imagine his dismay upon finding the "Gosnold" whistle replaced with that of "Vinalhaven." Now, either through divine providence or sabotage, the "Vinal Haven" whistle is in the repair shop and the discordant (?) "Gosnold" tooter is back in service on the "White."

Fred C. Greene, secretary to Mayor Tobin of Boston, was in the city today on the final leg of his annual vacation which ends next Monday. Accompanied by Mrs. Greene (formerly of Thomaston) he has been visiting some of the most interesting sections of Maine, including many of the lighthouses, which happen to be among his hobbies.

The Rotary Club

Guest Speaker Cornellis Says Lindbergh and Wheeler Given Undue Prominence

E. J. Cornellis, former New Yorker whose permanent residence is now Camden, paid his respects to two well known national figures yesterday, while officiating as guest speaker before the Rockland Rotary Club. The objects of his attention were Charles A. Lindbergh, who sprang into worldwide prominence when he flew from New York to Paris; and Senator Burton K. Wheeler, the fiery Montanan, who is No. 1 champion of the isolationist cause.

The audience yesterday was augmented by the presence of 11 visiting Rotarians and five guests. The visiting service men were Frank E. Poland, Boston; Dr. Harold Pillsbury, Baltimore, Md.; Charles A. Holden, Hamon, N. H.; Asbury Pitman, Belfast; Bill Cullen, Lewiston; Alfred W. Peruty, Springfield, Mass.; Robert F. Cox, Wellsboro, Pa.; E. R. Cox, Tyrone, Pa.; Jasper A. Erolin, Quincy, Mass.; Norman Dummori, Sharon, Penna.; Al White, Everett, Mass. The guests were Elmer Joyce, Camden; Frank A. St. Clair, Millbury, Mass.; Arthur Axburg, Bay-side, L. I.; W. H. Spear, Rockland; A. R. Earle, Pleasant Point.

Lindbergh is not the aviation expert he represents himself to be, the speaker said for there are today many men who are infinitely better versed on that subject than he is. Senator Wheeler was described as a man of seniority in Congress who assumes a position of prominence not warranted by his own ability or the size of the State which he represents. A poll of Montana shows that his own State is not behind him.

Neither Lindbergh nor Wheeler is entitled to the prominence in the press that they are being given today, the speaker declared. Willie is not played up as strongly yet whose views would you prefer?

Mr. Cornellis said he had little sympathy for those who would wait for Hitler to take action against us. "We might as well make up our minds now," he asserted.

Russia, as little as he agrees with it in governmental policy, Mr. Cornellis said had changed largely since the days of Lenin and Trotsky. Stalin's methods are much at variance with theirs.

Russia's move against Finland was to prevent Hitler from grabbing everything but Russia did not enslave Finland after conquering it.

"We talk and sing much about America being the home of the brave and land of the free," said Mr. Cornellis, "but do we have that with our acts controlled by the Government as they are?"

The Camden Hills Camp of the C.C.C. officially closed yesterday. The technical staff were not assigned to new positions, while the officers were transferred to other posts, the camp doctor going to the Panama Canal Zone. A trailer park for 25 trailers is as yet incomplete, but will be finished by the Bar Harbor crew.

Shoes and boys pants are the articles most needed. One very deserving mother who makes nearly all of her children's clothing with a broken down sewing machine (belonging originally to her grandmother) a machine which has been fixed so many times, that now, it is like the one horse shay—collapsed. If any one has a machine stored in the attic—workable and it is of no use there, this woman would appreciate it.

About this time—friends on the islands of Penobscot Bay—North Haven, Vinalhaven and Isle au Haut, get together and send in a box of clothing. This is carried by the Vinalhaven Steamboat Co. gratis—providing the package or box is marked—"City Matron's Office." This is much appreciated. Not only are bundles needed for Britain, they are needed in Rockland.

Please leave clothing at my office, or phone 663-W and articles will be called for.

Discussing some matter, maybe trivial, maybe serious, these two well known citizens were caught unawares by the staff photographer yesterday. Hello Ad! Hello Morris!

Dressed in civies, and becomingly tanned by exposure to Appleton blueberry barrels, Chief of Police Arthur D. Fish was back on the street Thursday, and might have passed unknown but for that genial and friendly smile which makes everybody his friend. He resumed his duties at City Hall this morning.

Patrons of Rockledge Inn are having oodles of fun on the sporty croquet grounds opposite the Inn. Sporty, because when the ball is hit nobody can even guess where it will stop. The field has more hazards than a golf course, but the Summer guests wouldn't swap it for the best croquet ground ever invented. Honors thus far this season are about evenly divided between Prof. Charles A. Holden of Hanover, N. H., Mrs. Margaret Ames of Brockton, Mass., and Wayne Drinkwater, who plays for the "house."

Miss Starrett opened the paper on "Shipbuilding in Warren," with this statement, "With the return of shipbuilding to surrounding towns, it seems fitting we shall review the industry which was so flourishing in our town from 1770 to 1867." She spoke of the difficulty of getting the ships down to Thomaston to be rigged, pointing out that the boats would be drawn from windlass placed from tree to tree along the river bank, with men and boys walking along the banks casting off the lines and fastening them to trees further along. She pointed out that many of the larger boats had to be lightened with hogheads fastened along the bilge line, in order to float them through the shallow places in the Georges. Miss Starrett named and located all the yards at that time along the Georges River in Warren, and some of the yards at Thomaston.

Following adjournment, refreshments were served under the direction of Mrs. Silas Watts, assisted by Jean Kelso, Faye Martin, Ruth Starrett, Griffin, Alice Marie Griffin, Lois Norwood, and Muriel French.

Decorations were two huge bouquets of golden rod at the hall entrance, and baskets of golden rod, black-eyed Susans, and Queen Anne's lace on the stage, and tables in the front of the hall, a bouquet of phlox at the rear of the hall. The decorations were under the direction of Mrs. Grace Simmons.

A CHRISTIAN GESTURE
Few of our townspeople realize what the loss would be to Rockland if we were deprived of our Salvation Army and their untiring work for human souls in need. Did you realize that 31 ladies from different churches go to the Salvation rooms from September to June and sew and put in order clothing that is given out to our poor? They do valiant work for needy souls in more ways than we realize. I was told that a Victrola would be of the greatest help to the workers if someone had one to give. It would cheer the hearts and speed the workers with the music. Send it to the Salvation Army rooms at once or telephone and they will call for it and don't forget to send your check in this drive that will keep them going.

"The novel, in its best form, I regard as one of the most powerful engines of civilization ever invented.—Sir John Herschel.

Ernest Hemingway, author of the recent best seller "For Whom the Bell Tolls" and his wife, Martha Heilmann, are expected to return soon from the Orient where they have been touring the Chinese war front. Mr. Hemingway tells his publisher he will have a number of articles to write and Mrs. Hemingway has a book of short stories in preparation.

An album of three records of Alice Duer Miller's "White Cliffs," tells the story of a brave people in a manner that has made Lynn Fontanne the toast of the American theatre. You may weep a little but your tears will be proud ones not weak, and they will be shed for the courage and gallantry of England. (taken from Vogue).

Among the new books:
The Dark House, by Warwick Deeping.

The story of a young doctor who wanted to be a famous surgeon in London, but who because he lacked sufficient funds, decided to go to a small town as assistant to an old man until he had saved enough money. He came to know and like his neighbors, he fell in love and married, he won the confidence and affection of his people, and found a new vision of a good way of life. A story that is sure to please Mr. Deeping's many readers.

Familiar Faces, by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Mrs. Rinehart's new book of short stories, is sure to please her many readers. Two stories should be especially mentioned: "Lily comes home at last" and "One Hour of Glory."

Not By Bread Alone, by Mary Frances Doner.

Three generations of women in a small Michigan river town live courageously to keep their families together. It is a brave story of everyday people who must work hard for their loved ones to achieve the simple pleasures of their lives. The boats that ply the Great Lakes bring them livelihood and often tragedy. A good story in an unusual setting.

The Golden Skylark, by Elizabeth Goudge.

The author's new book of short stories gives a picture of life in all complex phases; it brings back the past and interprets the present; it stimulates the imagination and stirs the emotions; and most important of all, it affords entertainment and pleasure. Altogether, the book makes delightful reading.

Keys of the Kingdom, by A. J. Cronin.

The moving story of Father Francis, a Scots priest, of his Tweedside youth, of the tragic event that led him to take holy orders, and of his 36 years of single-handed labor in a remote Chinese village where he struggled against indifference, famine, plague, bandits, even torture, where he searched for the eternal truths. The book will be popular because of its story, rich in the dramatic scenes for which Dr. Cronin is famous; because of its chief character; and because it will bring before the mind the great question of the part that religion can play in the world of today. It is, without doubt, Dr. Cronin's finest book.

Restless Are the Seas, by Evelyn Eaton.

A story of adventure and romance, with the same French Canadian background as "Quietly my Captain Waits." In Paul de Morain, whose loves and adventures form the subject of the book, Evelyn Eaton has created a character as fascinating as Louise de Preneuse. Again, she has devoted painstaking research to the gathering of her material, and writes a book that is authentic in background as well as

THE MOST HIGH

When I was a girl of ten my Father used to sing "O God our help in ages past, our hope for future to come, our shelter from the stormy blast, and our eternal home." Those words have never left my memory, tucked away for a time and then when occasion or thought leaps to succor they return in all their depth of meaning, their comfort and their assurance. Songs with meaning, hymns written by men of divine inspiration mean more to our success in life than we give them credit. I am most thankful for the early knowledge of the inspired hymns of religious gatherings.

The Time Is Now! by Pierre Van Paassen.

In this book, his first since "Days of Our Years," three years ago, the author, who has spent a lifetime witnessing and analyzing events, points out the steps he believes America must take immediately to stop Hitler. A challenging book, and worthy of wide reading.

The Preacher's Wife, by Ethel Hueston.

A true story of Ethel Hueston's mother, and as entertaining as any of the many novels she has written. No imaginary characters could be more interesting than the flesh and blood members of this rollicking family, with eleven children, nine of them girls, and the remarkable woman who guided them.

Snapped At The Rockport Carnival

Scenes taken at the Rockport Regatta and Sportsmen's Show yesterday afternoon as the annual affair went into its third day of the show which closes tonight. At the top is shown the carnival grounds and the harbor where the water sports are held. At the bottom is the water skiing exhibition with the boat making a fast turn at 35 miles per hour in front of the pier which was lined with spectators. The skis are about five feet in length and ten inches wide, being shaped like ordinary skis with rubber boots attached for the skier's feet. Considerable skill is required to manipulate these slender sticks; novices who tried them out soon upset or found themselves being towed through the water at the end of the line and the ski adrift astern of them. The middle picture shows five youthful sailors from the yacht Corsica 24, who set out to get a closer view of the races and skiing under their own power, safely bundled in life belts.

The same sunny skies which favored Rockport's annual Regatta-Sportsmen's Show on its opening day, prevailed Thursday, but the wind conditions necessary for sailing were lacking, with the result that the sail boat races scheduled for that afternoon developed into more or less of a drifting match.

In the 21 foot class of the Tarratine Yacht Club race, Mary Aldrich of Dark Harbor, sailing boat No. 5 was first, covering the course in the slow time of 2 hrs. 38 min. 15 sec. H. E. Whiting was second, elapsed time, 2 hrs. 56 min. 13 sec. The remaining five boats entered did not finish. Miss Aldrich was awarded a pair of hurricane lamps and Mr. Whiting, nautical reading lamp.

Talented Pianists

Sokoloff and Berkowitz Gave Rare Entertainment At Eells' Boat Barn

Vladimir Sokoloff and Ralph Berkowitz, talented young pianists and members of the faculty of The Curtis Institute of Music, gave a program of original music for four hands, one piano, at the Eells Boat Barn, Tuesday night, before a large and appreciative audience. This was the third concert of this type to be given at Rockport by Mr. Sokoloff and Mr. Berkowitz, and again their consummate artistry and interesting program wore its spell. It is a field that has scarcely been touched, and the work of Mr. Sokoloff and Mr. Berkowitz is attracting no small attention. The program:

1. Variations on an original song in D major, Ludwig van Beethoven

2. Sonata in C major, Franz Schubert

3. Allegro moderato, Opus 140

4. Andante, Scherzo, Allegro vivace, Allegro vivace, Intermission

5. "Mother Goose" Suite, Maurice Ravel

6. Gavotte for the Sleeping Beauty, 2. Beauty and the Beast

7. Laiderette, Empress of the Furcas

8. Sonata, Prelude, Final

9. Four Slavonic Dances, Antonin Dvorak

10. No. 6 in C major

11. No. 10 in A flat major

12. No. 8 in G minor

The Beethoven number opened the program in an ingratiating manner, and again disclosed the canny skill these pianists have in playing "so alike" that it seems as if it were but one performer.

The Schubert Sonata is like a symphony—one can almost distinguish the instruments, it is so greatly conceived. The Andante made a particular appeal in its melody and grace, not quite rococo but still ornamented with "bows and ribbons." The Allegro vivace movement with its melody skipping and laughing kept returning to the theme, a favorite phase of Schubert's writing.

The Ravel Suite was splendidly done, and brought to mind the fact that Ravel among the modern French composers occupies a place of prominence second perhaps only to Debussy. While both the impressionists, Ravel by no means an imitator of Debussy—he writes in a more robust style than most impressionists.

It was interesting to have another modern French composer appearing on the same program—Francis Poulenc. In 1927 Poulenc was among a number of musicians to revolt against the impressionism then dominating French music. Their cry was back to simplicity, and at the first concert in 1928 of "Les Six," Poulenc was represented on the program. He was then 19 years old. His work revealed an attractively independent personality. Poulenc felt the charm of "Parisian folklore" and in all his early works there are traces of this affection for tunes which reflect the folk song or "current coin" of the Paris streets. Poulenc's writing really bears unobtrusive ingenuity which parades under this delightful mask. The Sonata was given with great beauty by Mr. Sokoloff and Berkowitz, the Rustique movement being one of the finest bits of playing of the evening.

Dvorak was another composer who made an exhaustive use of national folk tunes and their melodic peculiarities. The Slavonic Dances were given with great dash with pulsing rhythm and a certain haunting quality.

Called back many times Mr. Sokoloff and Mr. Berkowitz gave an encore a movement from Hindemith's Sonata, "The Toy Trumpeter" by Bizet, and to the joy and satisfaction of the audience Schubert's "Fantasie for Four Hands, opus 107" with its lovely theme with the dotted rhythms so dear to Schubert's heart and with the harmonies shifting in a splendid way.

All in all it was a concert to linger long in memory. Patrons were: Mr. and Mrs. Max Aronoff, Mr. and Mrs. Zlatko Balakovic, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Bok, Mrs. Mary Louise Curtis Bok, Mrs. John F. Braun, Mr. and Mrs. Jascha Brodsky, R. Burdon-

Muller, Mrs. Fred S. Carver, Mrs. Joshua C. Chase, Mrs. A. H. Chafeldt, Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Cole, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Cornelius, Mrs. T. A. Crimmins, Mrs. Joseph H. De-frees, Mrs. Donald P. Notable Musicales

Superb Artists Heard At Concert Given By Mrs. Ruth Sanborn

The atmosphere of Metropolitan concert halls was brought to a Rockland group Sunday night at a musicale at the studios of Mrs. Ruth Sanborn.

Two superb artists gave so generously of their talent: Donna Paola Novikova, internationally known Russian soprano, and Helmut Baerwald, pianist of New York and Camden.

Donna Paola Novikova, whose teacher was the great Battistini in Rome, is now teaching at Marymount College, Tarrytown on the Hudson, and will continue this season her concert career. German lieder, French chansons, Russian folk song, and the brilliant technique of the Italian Bel Canto are all combined in the art of this truly great singer.

Mr. Baerwald, who has been heard at Camden and will again be heard this season, played Chopin, and accompanied Donna Paola Novikova in magnificent style.

This And That

By K. S. F.

Did you realize that the expectation of life has increased 12 percent in the past ten years and 22 percent in the past 20 years, so scientists say. But they were not talking about wars and its heavy toll or motor cars either.

Boothbay has had the noted playwright, Mark Reed, there for a stay, and it is predicted he will lose his heart to that lovely spot.

Are all those 13,000 National Youth Administration members dropped in New York in the Army? Elsewhere?

If I had a dollar If I had a dime I'd put some limerock chips On that roadway of mine.

Man, watching a little boy fishing, "Hello, Sonny, any luck?"

Boy: "Well, if I catch another I will have one anyway."

A marvelous invention has just recently been devised for keeping land airplanes aloft. It's supposed to be compressed carbon dioxide with some kind of bags air inflated.

The question today seems to be "Are you seeking to know about God or just seeking to use Him in a more effective way to your purpose?" This is the proper time for persons to search out their hearts and analyze the motives of what they are asking for.

A small boy was asked for a definition of the word "substitute." His answer was this: "Substitute is the right article made out of the wrong stuff."

Boston seems to be getting the small end of the great affairs of late. It is a point of vantage needed to be well equipped for protection and watchful understanding of all the miles of New England coast. Boston Harbor should ring with industry.

Even the State newspapers are taking note of Rockland's excellent Public Boat Landing and residents here are justly proud of this attraction on the waterfront. Note the following clipping from the "State Chat" in Lewiston Journal. Little that is worth while escapes Alice Lord's fertile pen and eyes: "Rockland's Public Landing, which only a few years ago was a shambles of decayed docks and rubbish heaps, is one of the best. The city maintains public moorings for visiting yachtsmen and a steward to care for their craft at the dock. Visiting yachtsmen and small boat owners are lured in their praise of the facilities that the city offers them without charge. Any time in the Summer, one can see anything for a boat from the 15-foot sail-boats to 200-foot yachts riding at anchor off the landing."

Were the charming ladies from California handclapped because they were short of time to gather weeds and wild flowers? Or were they expecting the wild beauty to be gathered for them? This writer's disappointment was deep that so few of Rockland's beautiful blooms of field and fen, of woods and valley, of roadside and street corners were not even shown. Again, the great variety of local grasses were not used. What the writer has seen in a Main street window of wild flower decoration, done by Mrs. Carl H. Sonntag so far exceeded anything she saw for the afternoon that she congratulates local ladies who have been under the expert guidance of brilliant Mrs. Benedict and others.

Mother: "Willis, what is the matter with baby brother? Keep him quiet."

"Well, he wants sumpin' he don't need."

Mother: "Well, give it to him."

An anguished scream came from baby brother.

"Willie, why don't you mind me?" "I did, Mom, and the bee stung him."

The United States exports totalled $4,000,000,000 during the first year of the present European War and that is worth thinking over.

A curious fact is, one can set a tuning fork to sounding without touching it by simply striking another of the same pitch near it. Try it some time.

THUNDERSTORMS

There are few who really enjoy the violence of thunderstorms, especially in the nights with the uncertainty of where and what will be victimized from their commotions. How we wait with bated breath, some of us at least, and tremble at the fierce rumbles as the lightning flashes fiercely through casement. Fears pent up through these boomings that crash from earth's end over the sea.

Then what joy, when the rain patters briskly and we feel the worst is over as the distant rumbles roll away into silence and the fresh sweet fragrance assails the senses as a cool breeze lulls to sleep and we dream of untold beauty to be in bursting buds that lift up their heads in thankfulness for refreshing drinks.

On Southern Island

Members of Dorcas Club Have Ideal Outing, Guests of Mrs. Elmer S. Bird

No more perfect day has dawned this season than greeted this portion of Maine Wednesday and continued from a lovely sunrise to a glorious sunset followed by a full moon and delightful evening. This was the day chosen by Mrs. Elmer S. Bird to entertain the Dorcas Club at the Lighthouse owned by Adriel U. Bird, Samuel Bickford and Edward Beinecke.

In Mrs. Bird's car we drove to the Harbor. Mr. Gordon, the caretaker of the island, was ready with the lighthouse tender, and after a bit of ramble about that beautiful harbor picking up from a lobsterman clams, lobsters and crabs, we headed directly for the island, where the recent rains have made of it a space of wild flower beauty, with golden rod, fireweed and immortelles in lavish abundance, and the gorgeous Bull Thistle and many other lesser floral colorings to vie with a sky intense in blue and water of equal brilliancy. Just enough breeze to make perfection of the day.

Landing on the island we walked through the somewhat burnt grasses that have not fully recovered from the dry spell, to the Lighthouse, built in the year 1857, up through what has been called by the owners Main street up to a stonewall entrance, where a post-box was facetiously placed by some joking friend of the owners. And here, just inside the wall, is a flagpole near which is huge and rare old carved ship's figurehead of a slave priest in gorgeous painted robes, in prayerful supplication to the flag. This also was a gift to Adriel from admiring friends.

Then on we went, entering in most neighborly manner through a well equipped kitchen where everything is furnished in keeping with the period of building. Inside the dish cupboard is a double set of stone chinaware with remarkably clear likenesses in photographs of the three owners on three sides of each piece. On into a very large main room, also furnished of the period and with many historic items of value and interest locally, especially the fireplace made entirely of stones gathered at "The Bog," which by the way, was once owned by Adriel's great grandfather. This was the work of Isidor Gordon's fertile mind and effort and untiring skill in searching for items of historical interest to these parts.

It may interest the reader to learn that a party of 56 persons was entertained at the lighthouse for several days, each with a comfortable bed and royal comforts. A few tents were needed, of course, where the men of the party camped in perfect delight, a bit nearer the dashing waves of the Atlantic and with Adriel host to the party nothing was omitted that could be thought of for comfort and pleasure. A rainstorm came and one member of the party was despatched to Rockland, returning with 50 raincoats (being all the city afforded of this article).

It would take many pages to describe all the points of this picturesque and fine place—old books, music, spinnet, a ship's ledger of 1853 of listings and purchase prices. A full list of the lighthouse keepers from the first down to the last, L. B. Dudley keeper when the light went out for possible all time, in 1933.

The Dorcas Club went well provided with lunch and supper, but our hostesses' son, Adriel, had seen to it that when this party was guest of the island, Mr. Gordon was to see that the ocean gave up of its best for his close friends of many years; and the days go down in the memory of each member as golden in beauty. Mrs. E. S. Bird, Mrs. C. F. Simmons, Mrs. E. B. Ingraham, Mrs. Hanson G. Bird, Mrs. Abbie Hanson and Mrs. W. O. Fuller being the party ably looked after by Lanscom Miller and Isador Gordon and a fine boatman by the name of Watts.

A little story at the time of the purchase of this lighthouse, Adriel was asked by his mother what he wanted with an island and lighthouse, and was thus answered: "Why, mother, don't you think that a lighthouse is a mighty handy thing to have in the family?" It certainly is for his friends. K. S. F.

SHE MADE HASTE SLOWLY

Well known along the Penobscot shores in the 1910's was "Massasoit," an outmoded laker brought to Maine for tramp freight service, largely to Boston, a semi-regular schedule being run by "Massasoit" and the larger "Mohawk."

"Massasoit" was launched in 1891 at Port Huron, Michigan, as the "O. O. Carpenter" and was of 364 gross tons, 127.6x30x9.5 feet. She remained in the service until condemned in 1918.

"Mohawk" was originally the "Maggie Duncan," so christened in 1890 at Port Howard, Wis. She was of 535 gross tons, 164.5x31.8x11.7 feet. Both boats hailed from Belfast. Photo courtesy Bill Strong.

REALM OF MUSIC

by Gladys St. Clair Heistad

Reminder is made of the third concert in the Summer series of The Curtis String Quartet, which takes place on Sunday at 3.30 p. m. and 8.30 p. m. at the Bells Boat Barn, Rockport. The program will consist of Ravel's Quartet in F; Andante Cantabile and Scherzo, by Tchaikovsky; and Mozart's Quintet in G Minor, with Joseph dePasquale, violinist, collaborating. The program is of unusual interest and should draw capacity houses for both afternoon and evening.

Another treasure is added to my chest of memories—that of an evening of music at the Studio of Mme. Elisabeth Schumann who played hostess to a small gathering of mutual friends. Mme. Schumann who was a renowned operatic and concert star long before she came to this country and who now occupies probably the foremost place among the world's great lieder singers is spending her second Summer at Rockport. She calls her attractive home "The Birdcage," and nearby is "The Studio" of which I speak. The Studio is a medium sized room, and on the evening aforementioned it was charming with softly shaded lamps and further enhanced by choice bouquets of Summer flowers and the colorful gowns of the feminine guests. It was a delightful group of men and women, a harmonious group with love and admiration in their hearts for Mme. Schumann, whose graciousness and charm of simplicity endear her to all who know her. She really is an amazing person, and I was aware of it more than ever on this occasion, when she played the role of perfect hostess to her guests, thoughtful of their every comfort, moving about to put everyone at ease and to maintain the admirable harmony, then singing several songs for their pleasure, after which she presided over the refreshment table with gay charm. Few women could do this so graciously and easily, and to me it demonstrated three outstanding qualities in her character—sincerity, whole-heartedness and womanliness. Dr. Krueger, Mme. Schumann's husband, contributed no small part in the delightful evening with his ready thought and courtesy.

The program of a recent Sunday concert at the Eastern Music Camp, Sidney, has been handed to me. The Camp orchestra, with Albert Wessell as conductor, presented selections by Grieg, Schubert, Haydn and Bizet—Robert E. Sault, of Lawrence, Mass., acting as guest conductor for the Schubert number (Overture: Alfonso and Estrella). Paul Wiggin conducted the Camp Band, which had Adrian Holmes of Burlington, Vt., as guest conductor. Mr. Holmes conducted Sousa's March: El Capitán, in which Pauline Dick did baton twirling to the delight of the audience.

I think I am correct in saying that these concerts are given each Sunday afternoon at 3, up to the last Sunday in August. It is a beautiful spot where the Music Camp is—the Shell set on the shore of one of the lovely Belgrade lakes, famed by trees which spread out over the seats placed for the comfort of guests.

Much curiosity is rife about Kirsten Flagstad remaining in Norway. Conflicting stories have been given over the radio, one of which was to the effect that she had been arrested by the Germans. Mme. Flagstad returned to her native country on the Pan-American Clipper on April 19, at that time stating that she would return to the United States in September. While no contract had been arranged with the Metropolitan Opera Co., she was under contract with the National Broadcasting Concert Service to make 50 appearances or so throughout the country next season. It is also said that Mme. Flagstad took with her little money and a not extensive wardrobe, thus indicating that she intended to return. The official announcement that she would remain in Norway until the war was over was made by her husband, Henry Johansen, a lumberman, a man of reputed wealth. One feels that the Nazi hand is responsible for this change in Mme. Flagstad's affairs, however.

While Mme. Flagstad's remaining in Norway will make a vital change at the Metropolitan, another serious happening has befallen the company in that Marjorie Lawrence, Australian soprano, was stricken with partial paralysis of the legs in July, and will be incapacitated for several months at least. She became ill in Mexico City where she was scheduled to sing with the Mexican National Opera Company, and it was suggested that an infection had developed as the result of smallpox injections given before she departed for Mexico. She is undergoing treatment at a sanatorium at Salt Lake, Ark.

Recalling that one of the favorite songs of Lotte McLaughlin's and a favorite for us to hear—is R. Huntington Woodman's "A Birthday," it is of interest to note that the composer has attained his 80th year and has retired as organist and choirmaster of the First Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, where he acted in this capacity for 60 years. This is a statement of note, and along with it his wife has sung in his choir for 53 years. In other words the two have given 113 years of service to the church. Isn't that something of a record?

Many Improvements

Being Made At State Penitentiary—As Described By "Vox" Editor

The current issue of "Vox" the voice of the M.S.P., contains an article by Associate Editor M. T. Sprague, concerning improvements which have been made at the Thomaston institution. It is here republished:

Visiting the West Block, I realized that here possibly was material for this month's article. With this in mind I sought an interview with Warden Welch and was surprised to find, although this was a major improvement, it was only one of many undertaken and completed during the four years of the present administration.

The great influx of new men during 1938 made necessary the construction of this block in 1939-40. It contains 72 individual cells with modern lavatory and toilet. The completion of this building meant the demolition of the old west wall and erection of a new cement one. The new West Block and Wall cost $100,000.

The kitchen has received a fair proportion of attention. The old ceiling noted for its peeling and dust gathering features was replaced by a new steel ceiling. The old cooking range found its way to the Prison Farm, and two double steel ranges now occupy that most important place in the kitchen. These are equipped with large smoke and odor eliminating hoods. A new cooling room facilitates the proper conditioning of food before storage in the refrigerators. Metal lined food containers erase an unsanitary condition of the past. Two additional large steam cookers were installed to lessen the difficulty of preparing food for increasing numbers. The separate dining room for those subject to segregation has met with the approval of all concerned. Also the cannery, a seasonal occupation, closely related to the culinary department has been enlarged and the practice of using small sized cans replaced by the use of gallon cans.

Special ventilators that condition the air in cell blocks and dormitory are a most important contribution to the health of all inmates.

The Commissary has been moved to a new location due to restricted space and its vacated quarters are utilized as a dormitory for trustees. This is a room within the confines of the prison with sleeping capacity for 45. Also the quarters of resident officers has been discontinued and installed therein a small dormitory for outside trustees.

The Print Shop, which occupied a large part of the schoolroom, has been moved to another building. Now the entire schoolroom is used exclusively for school. This room has been renovated recently and a new lighting system installed.

An intercommunication system has been wired up so that the Deputy's Office is in instant and direct contact with the more vital points of the prison. Also there has been a realignment of the plumbing and lighting system.

The various factories now use the traveler. This is a form by which the cost of an article may be ascertained at any stage of its manufacture or repair.

The old coal-bunker has been torn down and replaced by one of cement with a capacity of 300 tons. Also nearby has been erected a brick building with washroom and toilet facilities for the yard crew.

Outside the prison walls there have been important changes. The old brick house directly in front of the prison, which served for many years as the official residence of the preceding Wardens, has been torn down. Also the old prison stable at the western end of the front yard, after having served its purpose, has been demolished. Thus the entire front yard facing the street has become a beautiful lawn interwoven with walks and driveways after extensive grading and landscaping.

Warden Welch realizing that accommodations at the farm were not all that could be desired, after many persistent trips to the State House, rectified this condition by the erection of a modern barracks to replace the overcrowded farm house. Incidentally, this house has been put in first class condition as a rent for the farm foreman. This barracks has a capacity of 80 men—a modern dining room, a recreation room 30x90 feet, shower baths, earthen wash bowls with hot and cold water, these bowls being five feet in diameter makes possible the simultaneous facing ablutions of a great number of men, a modern heating plant, and a most important item, an artesian well drilled to the depth of 154 feet with a capacity of 1,000 gallons per minute.

Warden Welch spoke frankly and earnestly of a plan he has in

The Havener Concert

Brilliant Rockland Vocalist Wins Plaudits In His Home Town

Francis E. Havener, Jr., baritone, presented in concert at the Methodist Church Monday night, was greeted by an appreciative and proud audience, whose tribute must have warmed the heart of the Rockland "boy" who has been pursuing vocal study with Frank Bibb, noted coach-accompanist, in Baltimore, for the past four years. In the two years since Mr. Havener's first Rockland concert after beginning study with Mr. Bibb, definite strides ahead have been taken. The voice is more powerful, more controlled; his art shows greater maturity. His control of mezzo-voice is remarkably good, and tone shading depicts the inner feeling that gives his work much beauty. His fine stage presence merits more than a passing word of approval, and he possesses the subtle "something" that establishes a bond between performer and audience. He is most certainly a young artist to be proud of, and it would seem that even better accomplishment will be his with continued study and application.

Mr. Havener was happy in having R. Wayne Dirksen, as accompanist. His accompaniments were done with sympathetic and intelligent feeling, and in the group of piano solos he contributed to the program he showed himself a pianist of brilliance and interpretative ability. His youthful and modest bearing made a direct appeal to the audience.

Mr. Havener's songs were so consistently well done that it is a difficult matter to choose a high light. Strauss' "Zueignung" was splendidly done, as was the Grieg number which was repeated in response to insistent applause. "Benedictus," the fine poem of John Greenleaf Whittier's set to music by Mr. Dirksen, won marked attention by its eloquent writing, its drama and reverent line. Ernest Charles' "Clouds" was given a new touch by the definite pause after the climax preceding the closing soft passages which gave the sure feeling of clouds—this song was particularly well done. "Water Boy" received an interesting interpretation, given more slowly than is usual, and conveying the feeling of sun and laziness and languor. It may be justly said that each song received understanding treatment of line and content. Mr. Havener gave as encores in addition to the repetition of the Grieg song "Sylvia" by Olek Speaks, "The Minstrel Boy," and "On the Road to Mandalay."

Mr. Dirksen's piano solos, though representing the old and the new as to composers, were exciting and vivid in content. Few interpretations of Leduc's "Malaquena" have been as interesting and thrilling as that given by this young pianist whose future must point to success. He responded with a MacDowell composition, brilliantly given. Those who did not attend missed a satisfying and delightful musical treat, one that we all too seldom get.

Charming bouquets of Summer flowers were used as the decorative motif, and young women from the church, beautifully gowned, acted as ushers. Mrs. H. V. Tweedie as general chairman spared no efforts to ensure the activity with success. G. S. H.

view for the future which concerns us, as inmates, and the free citizen as well. He hopes to see a new building in the space created in the upper yard by the construction of the new wall. In this building on the first floor would be a large recreation room to replace the rather unsanitary quarters now used as such a reading room where those who wished could enjoy this privilege in quiet surroundings—a room for physical exercise so necessary during the winter months. The upper floor to be occupied by industries that would have trade instruction their chief aim. Warden Welch believes this not only possible but necessary, inasmuch as penologists recognize the features as the fundamental essentials of rehabilitation.

WISCASSET'S BEAUTIFUL HOMES

"Open House Day" Next Wednesday Offers Splendid Opportunity For Sightseers

Wednesday, Aug. 13, the doors of Wiscasset's beautiful old homes will swing open wide, and ladies in old-time costume will welcome for this one day of the year all who want to catch a glimpse of life in a Maine seacoast village during that period in the late 1700s and early 1800s when Yankee sailors weighed anchor in every port of trade on the globe.

Wiscasset captains at sea and Wiscasset merchants ashore alike accumulated small fortunes and built the lovely homes which are opened every year to the public. Proceeds from Open House Day are used to maintain the Library, housed in the old Lincoln and Kennebec Bank building, and for various village improvements.

Among the homes to be opened this year are the famous Nichols house on Main street, residence of Mrs. Alvin Sortwell. Built in 1807, it is well-known for its old Colonial doorway, elliptical staircase, its woodcarving and rose windows. Next door stands the Wales Hubbard house, built in 1795. In this mansion, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Parker Marean, are 17 fireplaces, and on its walls may be seen old wallpaper depicting the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

On Hodge street is the Hodge House, one of the three oldest houses in town, begun soon after the close of the Revolution. In this home, the residence of Miss Alice Taylor and Mrs. J. E. Hubbard, are many pieces of Colonial furniture, most of them museum pieces.

In the Court House at the head of the Common, the oldest in the State in which court is regularly held, such famous men as John Quincy Adams, Daniel Webster, Jeremiah Mason and others tried law cases. In this court house may be seen the oldest Indian deed recorded in this section and one of the oldest in the United States.

Passing the Congregational Church, with its Paul Revere Bell, the visitor enters the Governor Samuel Smith house, passing through a doorway which is one of the finest of Colonial types. This house, built in 1792 by Judge Silas Lee, was later the home of Maine's 11th Governor. In it the novelist, Blanche Willis Howard, wrote the novel "One Summer."

The very fine collection of old pewter and the Commodore Perry fireplace are highlights at the old Clark-Wood-Scott mansion, owned by Judith and Charles Chase. Here Mrs. Fannie S. Chase spent many years working on a history of Wiscasset, "Wiscasset in Pownallborough," which is to be released in early Fall of this year.

At the Library building many quaint old articles are on exhibit, and in the Arts and Crafts shop are displayed for sale many made things.

The home of Miss Helena Beilas and Mrs. Richmond White, known as the Hon. Abel Wood house, was begun in 1811. Beautiful itself, this old mansion is filled with furniture and charming portraits of the early 1800s.

On High street, too, is the famous Major Carleton house. This was once sold for a cargo of rum landed at the wharf at Wiscasset and valued at $12,000. The house was designed by Nicholas Codd, who also designed the Kavanaugh and other Colonial homes in Damascus, Scotland. The Carleton house is the residence of Mrs. Samuel Deggett.

New on the list of open houses this year is the "Red Brick House in the Hollow," the old Page house on Lee street, home of Mrs. Potter.

Out from town on the Bath road are the John Sheppard house, the old Clark house and the Judge Thomas Rice homestead. The Sheppard house, owned by Mrs. Mary Grant Rafter, contains much old Colonial furniture and wallpaper. The old Clark house was built near the site of an old Indian fort and commands a beautiful view of the harbor. Its owner, Mrs. Mary Sewall Metcalf, has an interesting collection of early American furniture. The Rice house, home of Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott Andrews is interesting for its fine interior finish.

On the way to Gardiner is the Francis Cook house, built in 1828. Francis Cook was the first Collector of Customs at Wiscasset, and still in existence in town is his commission signed by George Washington.

Farther out of town is the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Warland, the stone farmhouse built by Abijah Luckenson. Mr. Warland's collection of old glass is of special interest to antique lovers.

Boothbay Playhouse

"The Male Animal," which has been playing to full houses at the Boothbay Playhouse the past three nights will be presented for the last time tonight.

Next Wednesday, on the evening of Wiscasset's Annual Open House Day, the Playhouse audience will be greeted upon entering the theatre by the "Ladies of Old Wiscasset" ancestors of the late 1700's and early 1800's. The play will be "Craig's Wife" with Evelyn Grey in the title role and Richard Robbins playing opposite her. Members of the Wiscasset Art Guild will exhibit in the Playhouse Art Gallery during the nights of the production.

Much interest has been shown in the exhibition at the Boothbay Playhouse Art Gallery this week, which includes the first showing of the oil paintings, by Carroll Thayer Berry of Wiscasset, of the destroyers and merchant boats built at
